

WELCOME!

Welcome aboard Charon! Charon (pronounced Kha-ron) is an Epsilon-Class long-haul cargo ship owned and operated by the OBOL Corporation. We're transporting valuable cargo to the Tartarus Gate Waystation. We're travelling through deep space, which means that more often than not, the nearest colony will be at least six months travel away from you. Don't worry though – we've brought enough supplies to last you the whole journey.

During your stay aboard Charon you'll spend most of your time in Deep Sleep. However, if we have any problems that require a human touch, we'll rouse you from your slumber and you'll be able to get straight to work on solving them after a forty-minute Reanimation Acclimatisation process. The map overleaf provides a complete guide to the areas where you'll be operating.

In unusual circumstances, two or three of your work group might be woken up at once to tackle a particularly tricky problem. Many hands make light work!

If you have any queries, you can talk to Assistit – the ship's virtual assistant – by saying "Hello, Assistit!" aloud. They're happy to answer any questions you have. If you can't learn what you need to know by chatting with Assistit, you can arrange a remote meeting with me in the Meeting Room.

While you're awake, why not relax in the Break Room? A variety of snacks and drinks are available from the kitchenette, and our state-of-the-art Augmented Reality basketball court comes complete with galaxy-famous virtual teams to try your luck against!

Once the problem is rectified, it's time to go back into Deep Sleep. Don't worry – we won't wake you up very often. That's why there are six of you, so you can take turns.

We hope you have an enjoyable experience during the estimated three-year travel time of this project.
